United Nations Commission on the Status of Women – CSW67

The Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) is the principal global intergovernmental body exclusively dedicated to the promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women. The CSW is instrumental in promoting women’s rights, documenting the reality of women’s lives throughout the world, and shaping global standards on gender equality and the empowerment of women.

NAPTOSA is a strong advocate for the promotion of women’s rights. This is why for a second year in a row, we will not only be participating on the platform, but will in fact be hosting TWO virtual parallel events. The sixty-seventh session of the Commission on the Status of Women will take place from 6 to 17 March 2023.

South Africa is a country that has in place multiple phases of legislation to protect teachers and learners. The breakdown of the country's justice system, interest abuse all others. Despite the protective mechanisms including the criminal justice system, the phenomenon of Gender-based Violence continues to occur in our schools. This GBV is not limited to particular areas or to learners and teachers only. Learners are assaulted by teachers and other learners. Teachers are assaulted by learners and other learners. The assault is verbal, sexual, and violent. This assault will include a teacher who was assaulted by a learner and a learner who was assaulted by another learner. We will also get input from the South African Council of Education (SACE) and a teacher union.
